Las Vegas, NV - Singing legend and gay icon Cher has canceled her remaining Las Vegas shows because she is suffering from 'Vegas throat,' a condition caused by the dry desert air, according to the Daily Mail.

According to the paper, Caesar's Palace says the 62-year-old is suffering from asthma-related bronchitis though Cher's publicist Liz Rosenberg claims she is suffering from 'Vegas throat.' Rosenberg also denied tabloid rumors that Cher has been suffering from chronic abdominal problems.

Cher canceled six shows over the weekend, her last performances scheduled there for the year, but plans to return to the Palace for a running gig in early 2009.

Caesars reportedly spent millions of dollars installing a special humidifier in The Colosseum showroom, which was especially built for Celine Dion's long-running show.

'Cher looks forward to her return to The Colosseum early next year with performances to be announced soon,' according to a Cesar's statement.
